

WISDOM

Many times we are afraid.

Afraid not of the uncertainty life is bringing about, but rather scared of a particular outcome. We assign meaning and consequence to our decisions, even though we cannot know this. We are afraid of a thing of the past that is casting it's shadow onto a future - a scenario that only exists in our mind.

Do we really know? Can we know ?

Would we be scared if we knew, absolutely knew, that nothing could really hurt us ?

1. Cut paper along dotted line.
2. Fold in half along shorter edge (while holding the paper in portrait mode, fold it in half horizontally backwards).
3. Fold it again in half (like closing a book) so that the title is on the front.