

*"Oh, beautiful flower, the loneliest flower
No one sees your timid, curtained dance.
Though a swan-feathered trim and sun mirrored skin.
You do not catch a strangers passing glance.*

- justme

FLOWER

BEAUTIFUL FLOWER

by Justme

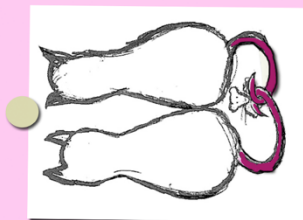

Oh beautiful flower, the loneliest flower
No one sees your timid, curtained dance
Though a swan feathered trim and sun mirrored skin
You don't catch a strangers passing glance.

Oh dancing daisy, sweet little daisy
No one sees your sighing bending grace
Through a swallowed half shade stem, life guards, life's own gem
And grew it in this green and perfect place.

Oh midnight flower, the quiet flower
No one shines a light, or warms the ground.
Through closed petals, you do pray, but never would you say
For a better place for you, could ne'er be found.

Oh sweet flower, sweet flowing flower
The bee he searches for your golden juice
Through the masters own pulled strings, and so many hidden things
Your the best that perfect ever could produce

Oh silent flower, majestic flower
You a giant in a world of tiny men
Through silence and subdue and by forever holding true
You are lesson to the noisy and insane

© justpoems.org

1. Cut paper along dotted line.
2. Fold in half along shorter edge (while holding the paper in portrait mode, fold it in half horizontally backwards).
3. Fold it again in half (like closing a book) so that the title is on the front.